THE NATIONAL GUARD AND NATIONAL GOVERNMENT.

HISTORY OF THE ARMIES OF THE WORLD'S REPUBLICS.

By Lieutenant SAMUEL A. BOYLE, JR.

AS this article is about to go to press the writer has been informed that the committee appointed by Congress, at the suggestion of the President and the Secretary of War, for the purpose of deciding upon some means to bring about a uniformity among the militia of the various states has submitted a report and offered a bill which has passed Congress with only 26 dissenting votes. The dissenting votes coming exclusively from the States of Pennsylvania and Colorado point to a sectional opposition. With the permission of the editor I shall have published in the next issue of Our State Army and Navy the salient features of this bill and how in my opinion it will effect or change the present relations between the Federal Government and the militia. In the efforts to bring about some uniformity and have the relations clearly defined and understood, we are especially fortunate in having a chief executive who has had a thorough experience with the evils of the present system, and the expedition of this committee's report suggests that his firm and vigorous hand has had a conspicuous part in the purposes of its appointment. I know from authentic information which is supported by observation that the betterment and improvement of the militia will be one of the paramount efforts of the present administration, and if it succeeds in its task, made stupendous by prejudice and misapprehension, it will immortalize itself in American history. I regard this policy as the one most important which to-day confronts Congress and the nation and thus it is written with a full appreciation of the meaning and moment of the Ship Subsidy, the Canal Selection, the Chinese Exclusion Act and our foreign relations. Whether it has been through a mysterious act of a veiled destiny or whether it can be best attributed to an expensive aggression, the fact remains that we are to-day by force of necessity and not inclination a Military Nation, and a most dangerous fallacy is our repeated attempts to dissuade ourselves from accepting this grim legacy and truth. It may be only a temporary predicament and it may extend to future generations, but I will hazard an opinion that no one, acquainted with the histories of those republics which have lived and gone before us, who saw their armies in defense of their own institutions invade foreign climes and by the laws of war acquire foreign territory, honestly believes that our inheritance from the Spanish-American War will be eternal peace. This very self-deception is more than anything else responsible for our failure to pacify or conquer the Philippines.

Without provocation or reason we very unwisely declared from Washington immediately following the close of hostilities with Spain that we were no longer under arms, and henceforth would be comparatively a country without an army. Carrying out this self-assumed trust by decreasing the efficiency and size of our army, we gave birth to an enemy in the Phillippines who seems to be far more formidable and dangerous than the Spanish. As a consequence our soldiers are compelled to fight this treacherous half-animal people with an olive branch in one hand, the bible in the other and only when in order to avoid assassination or destruction are they allowed to resort to the rifle. I desire peace as much as any member of our Senate or Congress but I cannot walk with my feet pointing towards war and my face heavenward and make myself believe that I am enjoying peace just because it suits my fancy or taxes to do so. We are reaping the fruits of a just war and we promise to continue to do so for some time; and since it is our avowed intention not to have a standing army in proportion to our needs or population, there is only one salvation and that is the Militia, and it is the duty of Congress and the States to do all in their power to promote the efficiency and value of the volunteer. I can conceive of no plan which is better calculated to accomplish this than making, with all severity and sincerity, the militia a provisional part of the Regular Army. Permit it to go on, in respect to some states, in its present condition and the very foundation of our government will be menaced.

WHAT IS A SOLDIER?

What is a soldier? I wonder how many National Guardsmen have asked themselves that question, or have stopped to think what is the real or essential nature of the human basis on which the discussion ultimately rests? The question is habitually answered in a dozen different ways and there are probably few men in the National Guard who can answer this question correctly. If we are to judge by the plans they advocate, the ideals they set up, and the attitude they adopt toward the army generally, it is evident that a large body would reply that in the first place a soldier is a man who is not less than 5 feet 4 inches in height. Others seem to believe that a soldier is a man who measures so much around the chest or who weighs so many pounds, or is a person who wears a particular kind of dress in a particular way, and who knows how to polish buttons, in fact they think that a soldier is essentially a man in uniform. Yet others regard him as a man who at the sound of certain words performs certain muscular actions with precision, who assumes with correctness the "position of the soldier" as laid down in the Regulations—"Heels on the same line," etc., and who keeps step and who maintains his place in complicated evolutions with the skill of a ballet dancer. Another school holds a soldier to be a man who salutes with frequency and alertness, who observes an exact ritual in regard to his kit and accoutrements, and whose obedience to orders is so perfect as to be automatic and mechanical rather than the product of individual thought and volition. But though all these views are held (I will not say expressed in words), I venture to assert that they none of them afford the true answer. They none of them, that is, express the essential quality of the soldier, the sine qua non, the quality without which the soldier is not a soldier. The only answer to the question, "What is a soldier?" which gives the essential, the sine qua non quality is the answer, "A man who can kill other men with rifle-fire." A soldier is a rifleman. A man may be able to kill other men with rifle-fire and not be a perfect or a reasonably efficient or even a useful soldier, but unless he can kill with the rifle he is not a soldier at all. A man may be a splendid marcher, he may be trained to take cover with extraordinary skill, he may be an expert at digging trenches, his drill may be perfect, his power of turning himself out well "policed" and with all his belongings in the most perfect order may be miraculous, and yet if he cannot shoot with a rifle he is no soldier. Needless to say, I do not insist that the true answer to the question, "What is a soldier?" is "A man who can kill with a rifle," merely as a piece of dialectical analysis. I insist on the fact because unless and until we not merely admit the fact but realize it we shall never get true reform of the National Guard.

Rifle-shooting must be the foundation stone on which the army rests. On that foundation must be built up a superstructure which seems, and in a sense is, as important as the foundation, but we must always remember that though there can be no superstructure without a foundation, there can be no foundation without a superstructure. In my opinion, the most important quality that can be laid on the foundation of rifle-shooting is that of discipline, using the word in its widest sense. Next to this moral essential we should put for the modern soldier the hunter and scout qualities—the ability to take cover, to watch the enemy and his movements, to see without being seen, and to take intelligent advantage of all means of protection from the enemy's fire while at the same time pressing his own advance. Next, the soldier should be able to use the spade, and be capable of rapidly constructing protective works which, though effective, shall be almost invisible to the enemy. These are qualities for use in the fighting line. To get him into the fighting line the soldier must, as far as possible, be endowed with the gift of mobility. He must be good at marching, but he must also be able to make use of other forms of transport if and when they become available. A soldier must be able to ride a horse should it be possible to provide him with that means of getting over the ground, and, further, he must be able to look after his horse if he gets one.

But though this disciplined rifleman who can stalk, scout and dig and also ride a horse if required, will already be of great use in war, he can no doubt be improved by the addition of certain other things—accomplishments rather than essentials, but none the less of importance. If he is given a physical training which makes his frame and his muscles like those of an athlete, he will no doubt endure longer and shoot more steadily and straightly than if he has had no physical drill. Furthermore, if he is something of a gymnast, he will if he is making a rapid advance on foot, be able to surmount obstacles with much greater ease. It will clearly, for example, be good for him to be a swimmer. Again, if he has learnt the handling of a bayonet, his enemy will fear the chance that he may get to close quarters more than if the same enemy knows that he has no skill with the bayonet. Lastly, if the soldier happens to be an expert at drill in close formation, he and 10,000 men like him may be able to get through the narrow streets of a great city more quickly and with far less confusion than if he had no practice at moving in close order.

It comes, then, to this: A soldier, whether he belongs to the horse or the foot, is first and foremost a rifleman. Including and in addition to that the prime qualities of the soldier may be roughly enumerated as follows. He must be:

1. A rifle-man.
2. A disciplined man.
3. A man capable of stalking, scouting and taking advantage of cover.
4. A man who can use the spade and pickaxe.
5. A man who can ride and look after a horse.
6. A man who possesses some gymnastic training.
7. A man who has the power of moving rapidly and without unnecessary friction in close order.

Strange as it may seem to some persons, the way in which the soldier is dressed, the manner in which he cuts away his hand when he salutes, and the exact occasions when he salutes, the angle at which his heels meet when he assumes "the position of the soldier," and so forth, do not really go to the building up of the soldier. He may be able to do none of these things and yet be a very capable soldier. I do not, however, desire to weary my readers on this score. All I want to insist on at the present moment is the necessity for keeping in mind the really important things that go to make up a soldier, and chief among these—the sine qua non—rifle shooting.

DISHONORABLE discharges from the United States Army are of a heavy yellow linen paper. This would be a good distinction for Pennsylvania to adopt.

THE vacancy of Assistant Surgeon in the Governor's Troop will shortly be filled. In all probability, the next General Order will name the fortunate M. D.

GENERAL WILLIS J. HULINGS, Colonel of the Sixteenth Infantry, has been assured the unanimous vote of his entire line, for re-election. The General has served the Regiment and Guard faithfully for many years and the high standard of the Regiment is due to his untiring efforts.

THERE is quite a stir in the artillery branch of the service over the inspection ratings and it is stated that Captain Bean has filed an official protest with General Gobin courting an investigation. Captain Bean claims that the rating for clothing in "Battery C" was ridiculously low, yet the uniforms worn on the inspection had only been received from the State Arsenal a few days before.

IT has been suggested by several prominent officers of the Guard that the First Brigade attend the New York reception in honor of Prince Henry. It is claimed that a trip of this kind would stimulate re-enlistments and also be the means of bringing in new material which is so necessary at this time, when Company Commanders are experiencing considerable difficulty in getting desirable men to enlist and are likewise using all their persuasive powers to retain those whose enlistments will shortly expire.

It is also pointed out that, at least, one-third of the Guard are of German origin and no finer spectacle could be presented to Prince Henry than the parading of a Brigade of the greatest body of citizen soldiery in the world. The First and Second Regiments, First and Second Troop Philadelphia City Cavalry and Light Battery A are all equipped with handsome dress uniforms and the Third Infantry is about being fitted with the United States Army dress. These organizations, with their fine bands of music, would certainly make an imposing display. City Councils might be prevailed upon to further the project.

Personal Mention

Preliminary inspections of the Tenth Regiment were made, during the week of January 27th, by Majors Cuthbertson and Crago. The several companies were found to be in excellent condition.

The Armory of Company D, Captain Alexander Johnston, Connellsville, Pa., was destroyed by fire and the entire State equipment and Company property were lost.

There is a rumor going the rounds in Pottsville that Captain Clyde Allan, formerly in command of Company F, Fourth Regiment, is an aspirant for Battalion Adjutant.

The Commissaries throughout the State feel that they should have the rank and pay of a Captain and point out the equal importance of their office to that of Regimental Quartermaster.

Trumpeter Ellsworth E. Bierbower and First Sergeant S. Frank Westen, Governor's Troop, have a long continuous record in the Guard, having enrolled February 18, 1888 and March 1, 1888, respectively.

Lieut. Samuel A. Boyle, Jr., Commissary Third Infantry, has succeeded in getting an award of $500 damages for Mrs. Charles Parmentier, widow of the late Charles Parmentier, principal musician of the Regiment. Sergeant Parmentier was killed last year, during the construction of the North American Building.

Captain Charles F. Seaman, Company E, of the Fourth, and formerly major of the same command, is about leaving the service and much speculation is being indulged in the quiet town of Hamburg as to his successor. Several of the old members favor the re-election of Captain John Ancona. Captain Ancona is a very able officer and Company E, under his command, would soon forge its way to the front.

Captain C. S. W. Jones (Sheridan Troop of Tyrone) is keeping his troopers hard at work on the inspection requirements and expects to lead the Cavalry arm of the service this year.

As a rule, farmers in Pennsylvania cry there is no need of a National Guard, as they have nothing to protect in case of trouble. We beg to reprint a clipping from the "Washington Star," which may prove of interest to our rural friends:

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22 (Special).—S. Cameron Young, of Middletown, Pa., is in Washington to-day trying to induce Congress to take action on a claim growing out of the occupancy by United States troops of his property during the Spanish-American war. The property he owns was known as Camp Meade, and while the United States paid the rental agreed upon, the soldier boys encamped thereon destroyed fencing and other destructible property to the estimated value of $8,000. For this Mr. Young is seeking reimbursement and to-day called upon the Pennsylvania Senators and members.

NOTES

On January 13th Adjutant General Stewart began the distribution of the marksmen's decorations won in 1901. They are sent out from the state arsenal in the order in which the reports are received by General Stewart, first in first served.

Captain George D. Snyder, Company D, Twelfth Regiment, has resigned his commission and sailed for Burmah, India, where he will be employed as a civil engineer in the new oil fields. Captain Snyder was also City Engineer of Williamsport and resigned that position. He was succeeded as City Engineer by Captain Fred A. Snyder, A. D. C., on General Gobin's staff.

In an order issued January 16 Colonel Burchfield, commanding the Fifth Regiment, announces the dates of the spring inspection by Major Jeffries, as follows: Company A, Huntingdon, February 4; Company E, Clearfield, February 5; Company B, Bellefonte, February 6; Company G, Lewistown, February 7; Company D, Blairsville, February 11; Company F, Indiana, February 12; Company H, Johnstown, February 13; Company C, Hollidaysburg, February 14; Hospital Corps, Hollidaysburg, February 14; Regimental Band, Clearfield, February 5.

Colonel Burchfield concludes his order as follows: "Let there be intelligent work all along the line, no effort must be spared to put up a first-class inspection; the future existence of the company or regiment may depend on the rating made. Get out every officer and enlisted man; companies falling below 80 per cent. in attendance and 75 per cent. in general average will be mustered out of service."

The following recommendations just made by Acting Adjutant General Frederick Phisterer, of New York, are submitted for the consideration of the Pennsylvania authorities and the newly organized National Guard Association.

"First—Officers and enlisted men of the National Guard and of the Naval Militia still in service, or who have received a full and honorable discharge—all other considerations being equal—shall be preferred in the filling of vacancies in paid positions occurring hereafter in the military and naval service of the state.

"Second—That anyone dishonorably discharged or dismissed from the National Guard or the Naval militia shall not be eligible for appointment to any position in the civil or military service of the state, of a county or municipality while each dishonorable discharge or dismissal is not removed as prescribed in the military code.

"As to the first—There is, in a degree, a precedent for this; and officers and enlisted men of the National Guard and Naval Militia having served five years faithfully, generally without remuneration, should receive this recognition.

"As to the second—It is but few days ago that it was my duty to place before you the fact that a local civil service examining board passed favorably for a position on the police force of a man who had been dishonorably discharged from the National Guard."

Under date of January 2, 1902, Col. C. Bow Dougherty, commanding the Ninth regiment, has issued the following General Order:

At the last Spring (1901) Inspection, the Ninth Regiment Infantry, N. G. P., took a long stride forward, and the ratings of the several commands of the State Guard disclosed the fact that this regiment occupied the first position in point of efficiency. This position of eminence was attained after a long struggle, and only by the energetic and indefatigable work of officers and men, and can only be maintained by a continuation of effort. As an incentive to further effort the commanding officer announces with pleasure that he has, by the generous contributions of citizens, who are interested in the welfare of the Regiment, secured a fund to be distributed and awarded in prizes, to be competed for by the several companies of the Regiment. The basis of award will be the general average attained at the coming Spring Inspection of 1902, the ratings therefor to be determined by the Brigade Inspector.

The fund secured will be divided into prizes, as follows:

First Prize: One hundred and fifty dollars, and Gold Medal to Captain.

Second Prize: One hundred dollars, and Gold Medal to Captain.

Third Prize: Seventy-five dollars, and Gold Medal to Captain.

Fourth Prize: Fifty dollars, and Gold Medal to Captain.

Fifth Prize: Forty dollars, and Gold Medal to Captain.

Sixth Prize: Twenty-five dollars, and Gold Medal to Captain.

The first prize to be awarded to the company having the highest general average, as reported officially to the Adjutant General, and published in the authorized order from General Headquarters, and the second prize to the second highest company, and so on until all the six prizes are awarded.

The Field Officers of the Regiment shall constitute a Board of Award to determine the disposition of prizes, and decide all questions where a tie may exist, and determine by a proper and fair method the award of the above prizes.

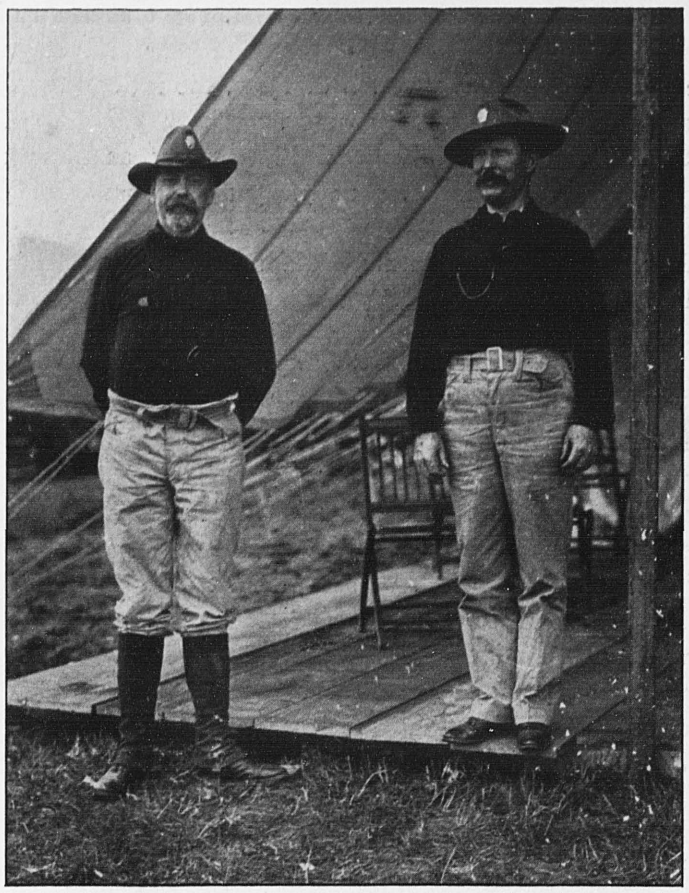
The usual preliminary inspections will be held by the Regimental and Battalion commanders, and in addition thereto the several Battalion commanders, with their adjutants, will make at least one inspection weekly, beginning at once and continuing until the regular inspections shall take place.

The commanding officer indulges the hope that every officer and man in the command will earnestly strive to maintain the present splendid record of the regiment to further demonstrate the efficiency of the command, as well as to show a proper appreciation of the interest which impels the citizens of the community to lend their aid and encouragement to the upbuilding of our citizen soldiery.

Much to the surprise of all concerned Battery B has informally decided on a member of the organization for its next Captain. Since Captain Wallace resigned, the commandership has been offered to five persons, namely, Col. A. J. Logan, Col. J. P. Penny, Dr. J. L. Shrodes, Lieut. A. W. Marks, and Lieut. Will T. Rees, in each case it was refused and on the evening of January 6th Lieut. Marks called a meeting of the non-commissioned officers of the Battery to select a candidate for Captain and Lieut. Rees was offered the position a second time. He agreed to accept the nomination providing Dr. Shrodes or Lieut. Marks would not take it, and as neither would, he became the nominee. On the evening of January 13th Lieutenant Marks informed Rees that he had reconsidered his decision and was willing to be the Captain. Rees acquiesced to his wish personally but stated that as his promise had been given to the men, they only could release him, so both agreed to leave it to a meeting of the Battery as neither desired or wanted a contest on the night of election. At the meeting held that evening Rees was the successful man, but during the following week some warm personal friends of Marks called on him and prevailed upon him to ignore his promise or demand another vote. Rees granted the latter part of the demand and again was successful. On the vote being announced, Marks announced he only desired the vote to know how he stood as his resignation had been forwarded four days before to the Adjutant General.

The fact of the vote being against Lieut. Marks was not owing to any personal feeling against him by any member of the Battery, but merely owing to the fact that Rees had been asked to take the Captaincy and said that he would do so after Marks had apparently firmly refused.

The members of the Battery regret losing an officer of such extended service as Lieut. Marks has seen, he having served nearly seventeen years. The candidates for Lieutenants are Second Lieut.



COL. FRANK I. RUTLEDGE and LIEUT. COL. J. CONRAD KAY,
18th Regt. Infantry

Clarence H. Powell, Sergeants James C. Stewart, Charles O. Smart and John Milton Ryall.

Lieut. Rees and Com. Sergeant John Purucker have succeeded in forming a stock company to purchase a building on Everett street, 50 by 97 x 115 with an additional frontage of 17 feet to build on, and purpose renting it to the Battery for an Armory. This will give the Battery the finest home they have had since they were organized. The company is capitalized at $10,000, 100 shares at $100 a share. The shares are assessed at $20 each and it is proposed by renting it out for entertainments, etc., to raise the price that was paid for it.

The first assessment will be used for making necessary repairs and extending the main floor on the vacant part of the property.

NAVAL MILITIA

The illustration on another page represents Lieut. Bond of the Naval Battalion instructing a number of men in the principles and use of the chip log and was taken recently on board the old "St. Louis."

Now that the weather has made it impossible to get out on the Delaware and all the boats of the Battalion are laid up until spring, the militiamen are devoting themselves to those drills and exercises which can be carried on on the deck of this well heated though rather small drill ship; and one of the most interesting of these is the artillery drill.

Probably few people know how well supplied the Battalion is with the sort of artillery equipment to make them particularly effective to aid in suppressing on shore as well as afloat those troubles which sometimes require the presence of the National Guard. For example nothing could be more effective for clearing away barricades or driving rioters from the sort of cover that was used at Hazleton when the boats carrying the Pinkertons were fired on, than the Battalion's two one-pounders which have an effective range of 2,000 yards for armor-piercing and common explosive shell and shrapnal and have cage mounts for use in the bows of scows or heavy pulling boats. The Battalion also has a navy 3-inch field-piece which has the advantage over its 3-inch equivalent in the regular artillery branch in that it does not require four horses to pull it, and they also have a Colt automatic of the sort used by Battery A, and two 3-inch B. L. Howitzers that can throw a can full of bullets through a brick wall. So that while the militiaman looks upon service afloat as his appropriate function he is in a position to be very effective acting independantly ashore, or in detachments working in conjunction with infantry organizations after the manner of many of the English infantry volunteer battalions.

The Navy Department, which has always been ready to lend a helping hand to the Naval Militia has supplied them with ordnance which while useful for state service would yet at the same time be useful in familiarizing the men with the sort of gun they would have to use on board ship. And therefore it happens that the militiaman who has learned the mechanism of the pieces enumerated above, finds that he has learned the essential characteristics of all the guns used in the United States Navy (excepting only the revolving cannon).

General John W. Schall, commanding First Brigade, having appointed Colonel Henry T. Dechert, Second Infantry, and Colonel William G. Price, Third Infantry, a Committee to draft a form of questions to be used in future examinations by the First Brigade Board, they have submitted the following report, which has been officially adopted:

Examinations by the Brigade Examining Board will hereafter be governed by the following regulations:

1. The examinations will be both written and oral. They will be held at Brigade Headquarters, at 8 P. M.,—the written examinations on the Thursday before the last Friday of each month, and the oral examinations on the last Friday of each month.

2. The written examinations will be conducted under the supervision of the Recorder, who will represent the Brigade Commander and report to him any breach of decorum. The questions will be prepared by the Recorder under direction of the Brigade Commander. The written examinations will end at 10.30 o'clock P. M. and unfinished papers will then be handed to the Recorder.

3. The oral examinations will be conducted in the presence of the Board. A candidate whose deficiency clearly appears from his written examination will not be examined orally.

4. The examinations will include questions from the following subjects:

Forms of government and outline of history of the United States and Pennsylvania.

Military code of Pennsylvania.

Drill Regulations (according to arm of the service).

Manual of Guard Duty.

Current orders on rifle and pistol practice.

Wagner's Security and Information (omitting Chapters V, VII and IX and the historical illustrations).

Groom's Military Handbook,—portions relating to (see table of contents):

Discipline and Military Courtesy.

Rank and Command.

Companies, Troops and Batteries.

Books and Papers (Company Books, etc.).

Orders and Correspondence.

Infantry Fire and Range Practice.

Field Officers will also be examined on:

Wagner's organization and tactics (omitting Chapters VI, VII, VIII and IX).

Wagner's Security and Information (entire book).

Groome's Military Handbook (entire book—noting changes under the new Military Code).

5. In all examinations accuracy of language will be considered an important element.
